Meet Simplicity

It has been some time since we started development of our new design internally called "simplicity". It's a completely overhauled UI, which will bring a clear, polished and more up-to-date look&fell to our websites. In addition, with simplicity, we are also making a big step forward to our sites being more responsive.

ERP5.com Relaunch

Yesterday we upgraded our second major website erp5.com to our simplicity UI. As with Nexedi.com the site has been completely overhauled with a clear and conscious design emphasizing business templates. Focus will now shift to polishing the UI and fixing remaining bugs and missing features.

Next: Documentation

Our main effort in the coming months will go towards making all documentation available through our new sites. This will include both moving and updating contents as well as providing means of quickly browsing what's available through the use of indices. The goal here is accessability - both for users of ERP5 and developers. Stay tuned for more.
